This course explores the history of women and the family in China through the early twentieth century. We will discuss the traditional Chinese kinship and family structure, familial relations, ideas of female virtue, and women’s roles and experiences that were conditioned by and shaped historical changes. We will read women’s as well as men’s writings to consider the question of how gender norms were propagated and contested at various historical periods. The course will be roughly chronological combined with a thematic approach, with each week focusing on a major topic. There are no prerequisites.

If you wish to learn more about background information of Chinese history, you can consult a general textbook (for example, Patricia Buckley Ebrey’s The Cambridge Illustrated History of China).

Course Requirements

Readings for the course consist of primary documents and secondary literature. Other materials include slides and films. It is important that you read assigned materials carefully prior to the class meeting (see SCHEDULE OF CLASS MEETINGS AND ASSIGNMENTS for weekly readings.) There will be regular in-class discussions concentrating on the week’s readings, which will give you opportunities to ask questions, make comments, and exchange ideas with your classmates. Please see me or email me when you have questions or suggestions related to the course.

Required Books (available for purchase at UCSD bookstore):

Susan Mann and Yu-yin Cheng eds. Under Confucian Eyes: Writings on Gender in Chinese History. (Berkeley, 2001)

In addition, a Course Reader should be purchased from University Readers. Please visit www.universityreaders.com/students for online purchase information.
All the required reading is on reserve in SSH library.

PAPER ASSIGNMENT #1 APPEARS ON THE FOLLOWING PAGE
Instructions for the Reading Report (3 pages)

You may choose to turn in this assignment any Wednesday from Week 2 to Week 5, but your report must be on the primary source readings for that week.

Write a focused, thoughtful reflection on two or more of the primary documents (i.e. the original historical texts, not the editors’ prefaces or introductions to these documents) from Under Confucian Eyes and the Course Reader, except documents #1 and 8) assigned for the week that you turn in your report. Organize your thoughts on these questions: What do the authors attempt to convey? What seems to be the authors’ main arguments/concerns? What might be the authors’ intentions for writing the document? Are there conflicting or shared points/views made in the documents? How do the documents inform you of the views/functions of the family and gender roles? In what ways do the documents complicate or revise your assertions about the Chinese family and women’s lives in traditional China?

Choose the documents that most interest you to work with. Read them carefully and think about your argument thoroughly before you write. It is required that you cite evidence from the documents (or other course readings/lecture when it is appropriate) to support your view. When you cite, indicate the author’s name and the page number. For example, (Reader, 22), or (Mann and Cheng, 78).

Papers must be typed, double-spaced, with font sizes and margins comparable to those in the course syllabus. Organize your discussion and write in clear language. A good report should have a concise statement of thesis at the beginning, logical development of argument in clear paragraphs and supported by evidence through the paper, and a brief conclusion.
