HIEU 134: Formation of the Russian Empire from 800 to 1894 (fall 2013)

This is an upper-division lecture/discussion survey course on the history of medieval and imperial Russia, from the foundation of Kievan Rus’ to the twilight of the Tsarist empire. We will study political, economic, social, and cultural developments by adopting an interdisciplinary approach. Course readings will be supplemented by film clips, music, and in-class discussions.

Course Requirements

- Midterm exam (40 %)
- Oral presentation and short paper (20 %)
- Final exam (40 %)

My Teaching Philosophy

Regular attendance is essential to your success in this class. I expect you to be there, to pay attention, and to contribute to the best of your ability. Genuine learning does not happen in isolation or while surfing the net! In my view, the advantages of using an electronic device in class are outweighed by serious disadvantages. Hence, I strongly recommend that you try to do without a laptop (cell phones are not allowed in class!). As a university student you need to be able to take notes by hand. The idea is not to commit every single word to paper (I am not dictating after all), but to sift through what you hear and determine what merits writing down. This is the first step in all solid learning. I am here to facilitate this process by every possible means, but in the final reckoning you need to take responsibility for your own education. On my part, I pledge to make this course as informative and worthwhile as possible, in keeping with my adage: there is no excuse for boring history!

I have created a class website on TED where I will post instructions for the paper and study guides before exams. If you run into problems at any time, talk to me, and I will be glad to help you out. Feel free to contact me if you have any suggestions for additional topics or improvements.

Plagiarism

It is your responsibility to know what constitutes plagiarism. If you have trouble determining if something is a breach of academic integrity, talk to me. Suspected plagiarism will be reported to the academic integrity office.
