This course explores the imperial history of the U.S. nation-state. We will trace the continuities and points of rupture between early settler colonialism and the U.S.' interventions in and expansions into the Pacific, the Caribbean, Latin America, and most recently, the Middle East. We will also discuss the debates on the U.S. nation-state's pattern of imagining itself as an exceptional liberal republic while it conducts its military policy and its diplomacy as an empire, or as Thomas Jefferson put it, an "empire of liberty."

OBJECTIVE: Our aim in this course should be to help each other acquire a sophisticated and nuanced understanding of the political, cultural, and social forces and discourses underlying U.S. imperialism. As scholars of history, we also have a responsibility to take on the theoretical and ethical problems that arise when we rethink the past and present in this light. It is very likely that we will be exchanging contrasting viewpoints on U.S. politics and policy to the classroom. We should see this as an asset, since it will hopefully lead us to have some productive discussions on the subject at hand. In order for that to happen though, we must approach this topic with an open mind and with the utmost respect for our peers and their statements. Pedagogically, my priority is to encourage you to not just vent out your opinions about the world but to critically analyze U.S. foreign policy by engaging the primary and secondary sources we will examine. What this means is that I want us to formulate and exchange analytical statements that speak to the information, issues, and debates discussed in the readings.
Required Readings

Readings for this class will be available for download via our course’s blackboard website which can be accessed at http://ted.ucsd.edu, except for the following three books which are available for purchase at the Price Center Bookstore:

Attendance and Participation

I expect you to attend all class meetings and participate actively. I will take points off for every absence (I only make exceptions if you bring me a valid medical or written excuse). I will also take points off if you don’t participate in class and show me that you’re keeping up to date with the reading and the discussion. If you are a shy person and do not feel as comfortable as others speaking in class, please try to make up for this by stopping by my office hours for a chat, which also counts toward participation or by emailing me your questions or observations about the readings or lectures.

Critical Essays (2 of them)

You will have to complete two 5pp. long “critical essays” over the course of the quarter. I will send you writing prompts for these. You can choose to come up with an original argument (as long as you clear it with me at least a week in advance before the paper is due). For paper deadlines, please see weekly schedule below. All paper assignments will be uploaded to Turnitin.com (via our TED Blackboard). That means you don’t have to turn in a paper copy.
2pp. Reading Responses (5 of them)

You will have to complete five 2pp.-long “reading responses” over the course of the quarter. These will consist of analytical reflections on the readings assigned for that week. You may relate the articles or chapters to each other or to the topics and readings covered in other weeks. These will be graded on a 5 point system: a 5 being an A, a 4 being a B, a 3 being a C, a 2 being a D and 1 or 0 being an F. Please choose to turn these in during any of the following deadlines:

All five reading responses will be uploaded to the TED Blackboard Folder titled “Reading Responses.”

Late Work Policy

All papers will be uploaded to Turnitin.com via our course's blackboard website (i.e., ted.ucsd.edu). Late submission of assignments will be accepted only in verifiable emergencies, and only by arrangement with me prior to 2:00 p.m. on the due date. Assignments turned in late without prior approval will be graded down 7 points for each 24-hour period past the due date (no exceptions).

Academic Dishonesty

Scholastic dishonesty is any act by a student that misrepresents the student’s own academic work or that compromises the academic work of another. Examples include cheating on assignments or exams, unauthorized collaboration on assignments or exams, sabotaging another student’s work and plagiarizing. Plagiarism is presenting someone else’s work as your own, intentionally or not, by failing to put quotation marks around passages taken from a text or failing to properly cite quoted material. The University guideline for penalizing academic misconduct is determined by the professor of the course. Any act of academic dishonesty may result in one’s failing the course.

My Email Policy

Please email me with questions and/or concerns about the course. I will respond within the next 24 hours. If you have an important personal question such as inquiring about a grade or class discussion, please visit me during office hours or schedule an appointment with me.
A Note About Reading Volume

Research indicates that the average U.S. college student reads about 20 pages per hour. As you will notice below, I’ve assigned about 120-150 pages of reading per week (i.e., about 6 hours of reading per week). Please make sure that you stay on top of the assigned texts.

Majoring or Minoring in History at UC San Diego

History offers students the option of a major, double major, minor, and a new lease on life. This 4-unit course counts big-time towards a major or minor. A history major is more than just a career path (in public policy, law, advertising, producing content for the digital world, teaching, journalism, politics, business administration, international studies, graduate studies, etc.); it also turns you into an interesting person. If you would like information about the History major or minor at UCSD, please contact Maggie Tilley, Undergraduate Student Affairs Adviser, H&SS 5041, (858) 534-8940, mtilley@ucsd.edu.
