Course Description
This course will cover the serious of religious movements in early modern Europe that historians have called "the Reformation." We will discuss movements for religious reform between 1450-1750 that resulted in a permanent split in Western Christendom and have had a profound impact on European politics, society, and culture, affecting to varying degrees virtually all regions and social groups. The course will take into consideration elite theological and institutional reforms as well as those that developed or were supported by ordinary Europeans.

Course Requirements
The course will consist of an equal mix of lectures and discussions. All reading assignments should be done in advance of scheduled class meetings, and students are expected to come to class prepared to answer questions and offer critical evaluations of the material. Class participation is considered an integral part of the course.

Course Readings (at Groundworks Bookstore and University Readers):

Course website – http://webct6web.ucsd.edu
The course website contains assignments, lecture outlines, study questions, some required readings, and links to important assignment information. Check the website regularly. Every attempt will be made to have lecture outlines entered on the evening prior to lecture so that you can download and use lecture outlines during class.
Class Participation – In-class discussion and Journal Responses (7)
Most class meetings will include time for class discussion. In addition each week, you will be required to submit one 1 page journal response to the readings for that day. The journal responses will require you to think critically about the assigned readings, pose questions, identify key passages, and contribute to class discussion. Responses will be read in class periodically to facilitate class discussion. Responses will be graded on a weekly basis. The schedule below determines when your weekly journal response will be due:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Monday</th>
<th>A-I (last names)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Wednesday</td>
<td>J-R</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Friday</td>
<td>S-Z</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Responses will be due in class – late responses will be marked down because they were not available for class discussion that day.

At the end of the quarter, you will be required to re-submit 5 journal responses for a final Journal Portfolio grade. Additional instructions for the weekly Journal Responses and the Final Journal Portfolio will be distributed.

Exams
The mid-term exam (25%) and final exam (35%) will include terms/identifications presented in class, quotation identifications from course readings, and essays requiring you to present a clear thesis statement supported by specific evidence from the lecture, discussion, AND course readings. Study guides will not be provided (except to identify quotations from readings), therefore you should consult lecture outlines for the terms and study questions for each lecture.

Critical Book Review (5-7 pages, typed and double-spaced)
Due in class: Friday, June 1. In addition to the assigned readings, you will be required to read an additional book of your choosing on some aspect of the European Reformations. You must choose your book and have instructor approval by Friday, April 27. A list of suggested books follows, although you are welcome to choose your own book as long as it is approved in advance by the instructor.

The book review will: 1) state the author’s thesis and conclusions; 2) state the author’s sources and evidence; 3) critically evaluate the author’s evidence and argument(s); 4) place the significance of the book within the context of this course. Additional instructions will be provided.

Late work
Without a written doctor’s excuse or other legitimate reason, all late work will be penalized 1/3 letter grade per day after the due date.
