Aims and Scope of the Course:

We will undertake a comparative study of genocide and war crimes, emphasizing historical precedents, legal concepts, and enforcement mechanisms for prevention and punishment. The course seeks to familiarize students with the chief problems that have emerged from ongoing efforts to prevent and punish genocidal killings, war crimes, and state-sponsored torture and to offer victims and survivors restitution and a sense that justice has been done. To this end, students will first undertake a thoroughgoing review of the definition and conceptualization of the primary phenomena under consideration here: using insights from law, history, political science, sociology, and anthropology, we will work to establish "genocide," "war crimes," "crimes against humanity," and "torture" as objects of study defined with sufficient precision to permit a rigorous, case-by-case examination that will yield meaningful and useful comparative analyses.

The class will then consider the implications of a number of episodes of mass killing in the 20th century and earlier, underscoring common dynamics while at the same time calling attention to the critical distinguishing particularities of each case. In the process, we will pay special attention to the importance of modern understandings of race, ethnicity, nationality, and religious belonging, the four foundational elements of the definition of "genocide" in the United Nations convention that establishes it as a crime punishable under international law. We will consider how the legal standards governing genocide emerged from the particular experience of the Nazi Holocaust against European Jews, and we will examine the relationship of those standards to other norms of international law, such as legal proscriptions against war crimes and other crimes against humanity. These additional provisions may offer protections to members of groups that have been or are likely to be targeted for murder or other crimes but appear to lie outside the scope of the law on genocide: e.g., political opponents, "common criminals," women, sexual minorities, the mentally disabled, non-combatant civilian populations of wartime enemy states, etc. In the latter weeks of the course, we will address the continuing political and legal difficulties that have surrounded attempts to back up the laws against genocide, war crimes, and torture with reliable and credible enforcement mechanisms, stressing the key role of the International Criminal Tribunal for Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

Course Requirements:

Eight weekly tests  60% [These will be given in weeks 3-10; the lowest two test scores will be dropped]
Final exam:  40%

NOTE: To pass this class you must reasonably satisfy all the course requirements with a reasonable and good-faith effort. Failure to satisfy any one of the course requirements will result in a grade of F for the course. While the lowest two test scores on the weekly exam will be dropped, the unexcused failure to take at least six of the weekly tests will result in an F for the course.

Exams: The final exam will include a substantial, wide-ranging essay or essays that will ask you to analyze the assigned course material in light of the major themes of the course, the varying methodological perspectives from which we will approach those issues, and the critical interpretative problems that we will study. Other elements such as short-answer questions or IDs may be included. I will discuss the exams in more detail in class.
Make up exams: Make-up exams will be given only in the case of a valid, documented excuse beyond the student's control (e.g., medical problems). Any make-up exam may be given in a different form and include different content. For example, the make-up test may be in the form of an oral exam!

We cannot make arrangements for alternate exam times due to multiple exams scheduled closely together, plans to leave campus early, etc. Check your exam schedule now -- they're available to you through StudentLink -- and make sure you've chosen a course schedule that you can live with throughout the course and at finals time!!

Academic Integrity and Plagiarism: It is your responsibility to know and observe all university rules concerning academic integrity and plagiarism. Any student found to have committed a substantial violation of the university rules concerning academic integrity will fail the entire course. I view it as one of my chief responsibilities to help each of you produce first-rate academic work that reflects your own original thinking about the course themes and material. If you have any questions whatsoever about what constitutes plagiarism, how to properly credit the work and ideas of others, how to evaluate sources for quality and reliability, and so forth, please feel free to talk to your TA and to come see me. I reserve the right to require students to submit any assignment to turnitin.com for investigation of possible plagiarism or other academic misconduct.

Required readings: Note: You should have read and thought about the course readings by the dates indicated. Books are available for purchase at the UCSD Bookstore and on reserve at Geisel Library.

Required viewings: Video materials for the course may be watched via streaming video (go to the library's e-reserves page for the course, and follow the links for Digital Media) or in the Arts Library at Geisel. You will need to enter a password to view the films. The password is PPHI (The password is not case sensitive.) The following is a link to your course reserves: http://reserves.ucsd.edu/eres/coursepage.aspx?page=docs&return=courses.aspx&cid=15278. If you are having trouble accessing the course link off-campus (or to connect to the UCSD network), you need to go to: http://libraries.ucsd.edu/services/remote.html. Students need to be connected to the UCSD network in order to access your course reserve page.

Required books include:

Also required: Course Reader -- The photocopied reader of additional assigned readings (listed in brief below) will be available from University Readers. Contact: www.universityreaders.com telephone: 800-200-3908

About e-mail correspondence:

1. E-mails to you: From time to time, we may send important course announcements to the class via e-mail. To do that, we will need to use your official UCSD e-mail address. Please be sure that your account is always in working order, and check it regularly. We cannot send these course e-mails to hotmail, yahoo, and similar accounts.

2. E-mails to me: Try to come talk with me instead! Please use e-mail only for scheduling and other very brief communications. E-mail is a great tool for that sort of message, but I just don’t feel that I can respond properly to substantive questions about the course using it. I will very much enjoy talking with you about the course material and any questions or concerns you may have, and our discussions will be much more efficient, spontaneous, and helpful for you if you come to speak with me in person. I encourage all of you to visit during my office hours or, if that time does not work, to schedule a meeting with me.
